

Is Phoenix Capital Group a Trustworthy Company?

With thousands of investment companies available from just a simple Google search, figuring out which ones are legitimate and which ones are poor investments, or worse, scams, can be a difficult task. So what makes Phoenix Capital Group a legitimate investment opportunity, as opposed to the myriad of untrustworthy companies out there? Today, let's review Phoenix Capital Group to see what they're all about.

Are They Legitimate?

Phoenix Capital Group makes money by selling oil, gas, and other valuable materials that it pulls from its multitude of land holdings. It does this by first identifying which land is valuable via advanced software, and then purchasing it for use. For this reason, the company is split into three divisions: acquisitions, operations, and investments. Each division handles a different aspect of the business, resulting in an all-in-one package that helps clients cut out the middleman. Additionally, any investor can use their retirement account (or IRA) for investment into Phoenix Capital Group's services. Sounds like a good deal for any prospective oil and gas investor!

It also offers Regulation A+ and Regulation D bonds, which can appeal to investors of all stripes. Regulation A+ bonds have a 9% annual yield, a three-year term, and a 5k minimum investment, while Regulation D has a 9%-13% annual yield, 1-11 year terms, and a 100k minimum investment. Similar to treasury bonds, the bonds offered by Phoenix Capital Group are fairly low-risk.

But Will My Investment be Safe?

Unfortunately, no investment is entirely safe. There are always inherent risks in any investment, but the degree of risk involved can be mitigated through a variety of options. For Phoenix Capital Group, that means using a conservative strategy to service debt commitments even with unexpected market fluctuations. The company seems to take its clients' money and property seriously, prioritizing serving them with the results they deserve.

In conclusion, Phoenix Capital Group seems like a pretty trustworthy company. From investment services to property purchases to various acquisitions, its plethora of services can help any client meet their financial goals. Their high ratings with the Better Business Bureau and 4.8 stars with Trustpilot just hammer that fact home. So if you're looking to invest in the oil and gas industry, Phoenix Capital Group is a good name to have on your list of choices.
